Privacy Policy

The Embroiderers' Association of Canada, Inc./Association canadienne de broderie, inc.(EAC/ACB) is committed to protecting the privacy rights of its members. These following policies are in effect for the web page, purchases, course registrations and magazine.

Collected Information

EAC/ACB collects only information that is voluntarily given by members and visitors, to be stored and used to provide services. Information that is collected by EAC/ACB shall be voluntarily provided by its members. The information collected may be retained in the EAC/ACB Archives, and in the working documents of the Board members but only while that the individual is active on the Board of EAC/ACB. or an Appointee. The information that is collected is intended to provide services for the individual member, to advertise internally the accomplishments of the members to announce recipients of awards and to promote the members within the organization who provide teaching and counseling services to the membership.

Information collected is used for internal purposes only. EAC/ACB maintains a strict policy, meaning, EAC/ACB does not consent to sell, rent, or give any information obtained from the website or submissions forms to a third party, other than those involved in specific association activities.

If information is requested, from outside the EAC/ACB board members, permission to release must first be received from a person it is in regards to. Permission to release information that has been collected by EAC/ACB must be obtained from the member from whom it was received. The member may refuse to grant this permission.

Information collected when purchasing or sending a submission form:

EAC/ACB maintains the privacy of its members transactions and uses this information for the use specified on the form. Credit information is kept secure and on record only for accounting purposes, as required by law.
